

Connie Wang, global editor: Xe May

"For some inexplicable reason, I haven't been able to find a decently priced, no-frills, classic Banh Mi sandwich...until Xe May opened up right in my neighborhood. They have amazing Viet-hybrid combinations like their meatball sandwich, Vietnamese tacos, but I prefer their classic BBQ pork, headcheese, pate, and pork sandwich, all washed down with a iced lychee green tea. I usually stop by Xe May for a quick bite before weekend adventures, and can't wait to chow down stoop-side in a fun pair of shorts, summer flats, and a printed top."
